Troops Stand By In Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Twenty-thousand troops and police stood ready Friday night for any trouble in Northern Ireland's weekend of parade and protest.

Church and political leaders issued anxious appeals for peace, but the atmosphere in the divided province was such that a single outbreak of rock-throwing could set off a conflagration.

More than 7,000 troops stood guard in Belfast, the provincial capital, for a tension-packed weekend culminating in Monday's huge Protestant parade to celebrate the victory of King William III over the Roman Catholic forces of James II in 1690.

Almost 5,000 other troops, including commando and para-troop regiments, will be on duty in Londonderry and other cities. They are backed by 5,000 men of the Ulster Defense Regiment, equivalent to the national guard, and more than 3,000 police.

About 100,000 Protestants are scheduled to march in Monday's parades here and in 18 other centers.

DOGFIGHTS OVER CANAL

Israeli Jets Down 3 Egyptian Planes

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli warplanes were busy over two fronts Friday, shooting down three Egyptian planes over the Suez Canal in the west and striking Jordanian army units in the east, the military command said.

A spokesman said the downed planes were MIG21 fighter-bombers that had tried to intercept Israeli jets raiding targets along the northern sector of the blocked waterway.

An Egyptian spokesman in Cairo claimed two Israeli planes were "hit" in a dogfight in which 24 planes from both sides clashed. He said all Egyptian planes returned safely from the encounter.

The Israelis said the same about their planes.

Israeli planes struck Jordan army units opposite frontier settlements in the Beisan and Jordan valleys. The kibbutzim have suffered Arab guerrilla rocket attacks for the last four days.

The reported kills of the three Egyptians planes brought to 105 the number of Egyptian planes Israel has claimed downing since the end of the 1967 Middle East war.

It was the first dogfight with Egyptian aircraft since the Israelis announced that the Russians had helped the Egyptians establish a network of SAM2 and SAM3 missiles 15 miles east of the canal.

The three downed planes evened the score in recent air fighting. Three Israeli fighter-bombers have been shot down by missiles in the last 10 days, according to Tel Aviv.

In Cairo, Egyptian Information Minister Mohammed Hassanein Heikal wrote in his weekly editorial in Al Ahram that Egypt has been using new air defense tactics along the canal for two months.

Heikal, a confidant of President Gamal Abdel Nasser, said the new system resulted in the downing of "an electronic American reconaissance plane carrying 12 Israeli crewmen" — a claim that had been withheld for reasons of military security, he added.

Although the Russians have erected a "formidable" missile defense system along the canal, Israel can destroy the sites "when and how it suits us best," Israel's air force commander asserted Friday.

Gen. Mordechai Hod told newsmen that the missiles do not interfere with Israeli raids and there is no "immediate necessity" to deal with them.

Curb, Gutter Work Planned in 2 Weeks

Curb and gutter programs for two model neighborhoods in Texarkana, Ark., should begin within two weeks, City Engineer Leon Ward said Friday night at a meeting of the Sand Flat-Glendale Neighborhood Council.

Ward explained the four-week delay in the projects was due to a hot mix program on 270 city blocks Monday July 2. He told Sand Flat-Glendale citizens that although they had expressed a desire for neighborhood residents to have priority on jobs to be created, there had only been two applications for their model neighborhood and two from South Texarkana on that project.

Laurel Street was noted by Ward as having high priority needs due to drainage problems and the fact that when work begins on State Line Ave., Laurel will be the nearest parallel street on the Arkansas side. He said he had discussed with Sand Flat-Glendale residents the method to be used to set priority those with highest traffic count having top priority.

Council President Elwood Shannon said the neighborhood has $50,000 to put into the project, and Ward said the city's cost for engineering, excavation and concrete pavement sections would vary according to the need for materials.

Ward said 80 per cent of Sand Flat-Glendale neighborhood streets now have curbs and gutters and noted that the plan is to complete the job on all other streets. However, he said, rebuilding Laurel Street is also needed. He proposed coming back to the council after the project is well under way in case the funds seem not sufficient to curb and gutter all streets as well as rebuild Laurel, so that a decision can be made then whether to give priority to completing curbs and gutters or rebuilding Laurel.

The city engineer said priority on curb and gutter for streets in South Texarkana would be based mainly on drainage problems. South Texarkana is 100 per cent open ditch on streets," Ward said.

Budget Deficit Could Reach Three Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are signs that President Nixon's budget for the fiscal year just ended will show a deficit of possibly $1 billion instead of the $1.8 billion estimated by the White House only seven weeks ago.

Administration sources said Friday a steep drop in corporate income tax collections, resulting from falling corporate profits, has clouded the budget outlook.

The final figures for fiscal 1970—the government year that closed on June 30, and the first for which Nixon had sole budget responsibility—are expected in about 10 days.

Officials indicated that the spending total, which was estimated at $196.2 billion on May 19, will wind up slightly below $198 billion because of administration pressurs to hold spending down.

The original budget figures Nixon sent to Congress on Feb. 2 showed outlays at $197.9 billion and revenues totaling $196.1 billion, for a projected surplus of $1.5 billion.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS

Tax-Exempt Status Revoked For Discrimination by IRS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration said Friday it will revoke the tax-exempt status of private schools that do have nondiscriminatory racial admissions policies. The decision climaxed a year long intensive debate within the government.

An Internal Revenue Service statement said the IRS had decided "it can no longer legally justify allowing tax-exempt status to private schools which practice racial discrimination nor can it treat gifts to such schools as charitable deductions for income tax purposes."

IRS Commissioner Randolph W. Thrower said the 10,000 schools with exemptions will be asked to show that they have nondiscriminatory admission policies.

The White House said the IRS decision had been submitted to and approved by President Nixon.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler added in a statement the President "believes that ultimately the tax status of racially discriminatory private schools will be determined by the courts and that this is desirable.

"At the same time, the President is concerned with preserving the religious and other private schools that contribute much to the diversity and strength of the American educational system. He believed that the tax-exempt status of these schools can and should be continued."

The charge has frequently been made that many of the schools, particularly in the Deep South, were set up with the intention of keeping them all-white.

The new policy will be implemented over the "next few months," Thrower said, but he said he doubted all 10,000 could be reviewed by the time school begins in the Fall.

Those that keep their exempt status, he said, will be checked through the agency's normal examinatio procedures for tax-exempt organizations, but "we would assume that a statement is in good faith and will be complied with," Thrower told a news conference.

He said the procedure will be this:

Exempt private schools will receive written inquiries from IRS district directors and it is anticipated that in most instances evidence of a nondiscriminatory policy can be supplied by reference to published statements of policy or to the racial constituency of the student body.

"Where a school fails to establish that it has a racially nondiscriminatory admission policy, an outstanding ruling of exemption will be withdrawn," he pointed out that the Johnson administration suspended all new exemptions for segregated private schools for two years beginning in 1965, and said the Nixon administration took up the question in late spring or early summer of 1969.

Since then, he said, "there may have been one or two rulings issued which might be questionable.

Gov. Smith Approves Police Training Funds

Over $13,000 in federal money was approved by Texas Gov. Preston Smith Friday to fund a one-year regional police training program sponsored by the Ark-Tex Council of Governments (COG) in Texarkana.

The $13,675, grant, provided by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and administered by the Texas Criminal Justice Council was approved by Gov. Smith on the recommendation of the council.

The Ark-Tex COG will contract with the East Texas Police Academy at Kilgore, Tex., Junior College, to pay one-half of the salary of a director of police training. The grant will also pay tuition for 70 officers to attend a four-week basic course and a one-week specialized course. The training program will run from the present until June 30, 1971.

The other half of the director's salary will be paid by a similiar grant to the East Texas Council of Governments in Abilene. The East Texas COG's grant of $15,775 will finance 90 trainees in the same program.

Participating counties include Bowie, Red River, Lamar, Delta, Hopkins, Franklin, Titus, Morris and Cass Counties.

DR. BILLY J. HARGIS

Appreciation Week Supper Set Tonight

Dr. Billy James Hargis of Tulsa, Okla., will be the featured speaker at the Texarkana Law Enforcement and Firefighters Appreciation Week Supper at 6 p.m. tonight in the Razorback Stadium.

The appreciation week activities, sponsored by the Tri-State Citizens Council and the Texarkana Young Americans for Freedom, were also endorsed by the mayors of Wake Village, Texarkana, Tex., and Texarkana, Ark., when they signed a proclamation designating July 5-11 as Law Enforcement and Firefighters Appreciation Week.

Dr. Hargis, a former Texarkanian and director of the Christian Crusade, accepted an invitation to speak at tonight's activities two weeks ago.

Spokesman for the Tri-State Citizens Council Dillon Anthony said that the other featured speaker, H. L. Hunt, Dallas, Tex., oilman, had notified the council that he would not be able to attend the Appreciation Week activities.

Dr. Hargis is the son of Mrs. J. E. Hargis of Texarkana. He attended Texas High School and Ozark Bible Collegg in Bentonville, Ark. He was ordained a Church of Christ minister in the early 1940's.

Anthony said preparations for the Appreciation supper included chicken dinners for up to 5,000 persons.

OBSERVES RESERVE TRAINING AT DEPOT — Major General Joseph R. Russ, deputy commanding general for Reserve Forces, Fourth U.S. Army, observed training of some 150 Louisiana reservists at Red River Army Depot. Maj. Gen. Russ also attended a briefing session on the depot's mission and facilities. He was accompanied by Col. Eugene D'Ambrosio, commander of the depot, and officials of the Louisiana Reserve Unit.

there for every one of them."

A member of the audience, during a question and answer period following the main speaking, asked Patton his feelings on obscene movies, legalized gambling, and open saloons.

Patton replied, in reference to obscene movies, "I don't think young people under 18 should be allowed to see those types of movies, and penalties for operators who allow young people into the movies should be made so stiff it would not be likely to happen."

Patton said he was satisfied with present legislation allowing mixed drinks to be served only in private clubs, and he claimed legalized gambling would bring "an undesirable element into this district."

Republican candidates for Governor of Texas Paul Eggers, and Democratic candidate for governor Bob Compton of El Dorado, Ark., both made brief statements to the Jaycee meeting prior to the remarks of Douglas and Patton.

Eggers told the group people across Texas were "tired of student unrest."

"Student unrest has caused a polarization of old people against young people across the nation," Eggers commented. "We have to reach over the differences and bring young and old together."

Eggers said if elected, he would try to "bring young people into the government."

Compton told the group "Arkansas falls short of sister and border states. Arkansas is still 49th in per capital income in the nation."

"Young people," he said, "are the major exports of the state. We spend tax money on education and benefit for young people in our state, "he added," and they leave to go to more lucrative areas.

"We have no return on this tax money," he said. "It's time we did something different in the state. The old cliches and rhetoric have not worked."

Compton said until something different is done in Arkansas, the state will still be plague with lack of economic opportunity, low per capita income, and the exportation of young people from the state.

Compton said if elected, he would ...attempt to affect Arkansas so that "All who want to will work, all who need assistance will be able to obtain it, and all will pay equitable taxes."

Patton and Sen. Douglas, after the meeting, were asked if a debate between the two candidates had been scheduled.

Patton replied he would welcome a debate, with incumbent Douglas, and said the matter would be settled in a meeting at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, to decide if the candidates would go on a speaking tour of the district.

Sen. Douglas said he doubted if any of the speakings would be scheduled, except in Texarkana and Miller County.

AIRPORT ENTRANCE

Extension Of 39th St. Set

Extension of 39th street to the Texarkana Municipal Airport entrance will begin within two months, according to Arkansas side City Manager Paul Schriever.

"Within the next 30 days to 60 days," Schriever said, "Work will commence on clearing and opening 39th street along a new proposed route from the vicinity of the airport entrance in a westerly direction until the road joins up with the existing 39th street."

"Within the next week or two survey crews will commence staking right-of-way and shortly after that the city and county crews working in cooperation with each other will commence to open up the thoroughfare," Schriever said.

"Total cost of the project will be $700,00 with 50 per cent federal funding under Traffic Operations Program to Increase Capacity and Safety (TOPICS) and 50 per cent city funding.

"Approval of the grant came through yesterday," Schriever said, "but we don't have the cash in hand yet."

Schriever said all required right-of-way for the project has either been acquired or will be taken by condemnation. All condemnation suits have been filed by the city.

Voter Registration Deadline Set Aug. 3

The miller County Clerk's office will be open today from 8 a.m. until noon to provide persons who work during the week an opportunity to register to vote before the Aug. 3 deadline.

Arkansas has a permanent voting list, requiring a person to register only once to be eligible to vote in all city, school, county and state elections. If a voter failed to cast a ballot in any elections held during a four year period, he is dropped from the voting list and must re-register at the clerk's office. He also must be registered 20 days prior to any electioh to be eligible to vote in that election.

To register a person must appear in person at the county clerk's office to sign his permanent registration card. Voting requirements in Arkansas are resident of the state for one year, resident of county for six months, resident of precinct for 30 days and be 21 years old.

A person who moves from one precinct to another must notify the clerk's office so his name will appear on the correct precinct voting list, or he will not be allowed to vote.

To vote in Arkansas Aug. 25 primary elections, residents must be registered or notify the office or a change of precinct by Aug. 3 or miss their chance to cast a ballot in the election.

Mercury Pollution Found in 14 States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Potentially dangerous levels of the toxic chemical mercury have been found in the waters of 14 states, leading one state to request federal disaster aid.

The metallic water pollutant —source of the 19th century "Mad Hatter's" disease—has forced fishing bans of varying degree in some waters of most of the affected states.

Alabama Gov. Albert Brewer is alarmed about the economic consequences of a mercury-caused ban on commercial fishing in some 51,000 acres of state waterways. He says he will request federal disaster aid.

The major source of water-borne mercury, federal officials say, is discharge from industries using the metal in the manufacture of paper, chlorine, sodium, and plastics.

There have been no reported cases of mercury poisoning in this country from contaminated fish and shellfish. But 43 persons died in Japan a few years ago from fish contaminated by the discharged a large plastics company.

Federal health officials suspect that cases exist but have escaped correct diagnosis, and that others may crop up soon regardless of new control measures.

The reason mercury has a life of at least 100 years, water cannot be sanitized of existing millions of pounds, and the metal collects in and resists removal from vital human tissues, especially brain and nerve cells.

Mercury causes progressive brain damage, blindness, kidney disease, and even death when absorbed in large quantities.

The insanity that afflicted some 19th century hat makers using mercury to shrink felt fibers inspired Lewis Carroll's portrait of the Mad Hatter in "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland."

Mercury is also used as a fungicide on seed for grain crops. From the seed it has found it way into hogs in New Mexico, cattle in Oregon, and pheasants in Montana and California.

A New Mexico family was severely poisoned in January after eating mercury-contaminated pork.

Mercury has been found in significant amounts in waters of Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, West Virginia, and Wisconsin.

Oil Refinery To Shut Down

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP)—Mobil Oil Corp. will shut down its refinery Oct. 1, Manager Harry A. Lutz announced Friday.

About 250 persons are affected by the closing. Many employes are eligible for retirement; some will be transferred, and others will receive termination notices, Lutz said.

He said continued operation of the refinery no longer is justified economically, but an oil distributing operation will continue.
